

I strongly oppose this modification to the rules for broadcast station ownership. A healthy democracy requires public media free from domination by large corporations. Experience with radio station consolidation by Clear Channel shows the danger to diversity of broadcast opinion, local services, and jobs. The public interest is not served by this proposed rule change. Diversity of media does not ameliorate the damage since cable and internet providers are also large corporations with considerable cross ownership of other media outlets.